New, More Powerful Metal Forming Company Created from Two Companies

Belleville, Mich., September 18, 2006—Bayloff Die & Machine Company, a metal stamping and die manufacturer, announced today that it has combined its two separate operating divisions into one new company. Bayloff along with Target Stamped Products of Kinsman, Ohio, will now operate as a single entity called Bayloff Stamped Products. The new, larger company provides a wide variety of engineering, tooling and stamping services primarily to the automotive industry.

“The combined power of these two companies gives our customers an unmistakable advantage,” said Brian Bayer, general manager of the new Bayloff. “Individually we supplied parts to many of the same customers, but on different programs. By combining our engineering and tool-making capabilities, and with our two plants, we offer everything our customers need from one supplier.”

Helmut Bayer founded the former Bayloff Die & Stamping in 1948. Together with his son, Richard, they built Bayloff into a full-service company and major supplier to numerous Tier One automotive manufacturers. Today the next generation of Bayers—Brian, Chris and Adam Bayer—are introducing new services to further build on the long-established relationships Bayloff enjoys with some of the most recognizable names in the automotive industry.

Target Stamped Products was founded in 1948 and acquired by the Bayer family in 1997. Target specializes in deep drawn metal stampings and engineering services for the automotive industry. Target has built a strong reputation for saving material through its transfer die technology.

Bayloff Stamped Products, with approximately 200 employees in two plants, provides engineering, in-house tool-making, deep draw stamping, and parts assembly and finishing services to a variety of automotive and consumer products manufacturing companies across North America.
